Case Study

NEW CCTV SURVEILLANCE FOR DATA PLASTICS

Data Plastics in Witney, Oxfordshire are experts in design, tool, manufacture and assembly of moulded plastic parts. They operate a busy 24 hour operation and trade extensively in the UK and all over the world.

After recruiting additional staff to cover a busy period, the management team expressed concerns over the security of the building, in particular activity in restricted areas and work during the night shifts. They spoke to several surveillance providers and selected Connaught to install eleven cameras covering the internal areas of the building.

Connaught implemented a full cover CCTV surveillance system monitoring the whole of their internal site. This was addressed with three different types of cameras to suit the individual location. The directors were able to access both the live and recorded footage via a web browser, as well as archived footage which was available anytime, anywhere.

Joe Reeve, Data Plastics Managing Director said "I am so pleased that I chose Connaught to install our new CCTV system. The high-quality installation was completed on time and within budget and met with all industry standards. I was particularly impressed with the neatness of the cabling work – you would hardly know they'd been there! I appreciate the advice and prompt service I receive as part of our ongoing maintenance agreement and am very pleased to recommend Connaught for their professionalism and high level of service".

Challenges

- Lack of surveillance over restricted areas in the building
- No tracking or recording of night-shift activity
- No integrated security system for the inside of the building

Value Created

- A full CCTV surveillance system that is both cost effective but easy to install, use and maintain
- High-definition surveillance, including live and archived footage available anytime, anywhere
- Implementation of discrete and covert cameras for more sensitive areas
